The mission of the Food Integrity Campaign—a program of the Government Accountability Project (GAP)—is to enhance overall food integrity by protecting the rights of employees in the food industry and government who speak out against unsafe, unhealthy and inhumane practices.

The Government Accountability Project (GAP), the nation’s leading whistleblower protection and advocacy organization since 1977, provides confidential expert legal advice and counseling to workers who expose wrongdoing on the job. We offer independent and objective information—and we’ll protect your privacy.

Food Integrity Campaign

Protecting Food.
Empowering Whistleblowers.

Even when threatened and intimidated.

Luckily, there are eyes and ears along the way that care.

Those who speak out and tell us the truth!

We’d like to think the corporations and lawmakers that are supposed to keep our food safe have our best interests in mind...

But the reality is, there is much they’d prefer hidden from view.

It used to be easy to tell if your food had integrity...

...but we’ve become disconnected from the source of our food.

...when there is so much that we can’t see?

So how do we keep the system honest...

The Food Integrity Campaign is unique because it offers free and reduced cost legal services to whistleblower plaintiffs. Fighting government and industry giants alone can be a daunting task. We help individual truth-tellers alter the relationship of power between the food industry and consumers.

There are now new and improved legal protections for whistleblowers. But the laws that protect food integrity and whistleblowers cannot exist without effective legislative advocacy. The Food Integrity Campaign’s legislative agenda includes state and local causes as well as regulatory reform.

Outreach is essential to educating consumers and informing whistleblowers. Many would-be whistleblowers remain silent because they are not aware of their rights and the resources available to them. We take a proactive approach to reaching out and providing resources to those interested in food integrity.

Corrupt organizations are willing to go to extreme lengths to keep the public from knowing their secrets. An unwitting whistleblower can quickly find themselves the victim of a brutal smear campaign. We use communications and media to ensure truth-tellers get a voice and that their important messages reach the public, who in turn, can activate change.
